I think the truth is we are so far below the politicians radar that it makes little difference who is in the White House. We are more or less just dealing with the whims of the bureaucrats themselves. The higher level bureaucrats may be political apointees, but I don't think the decisions even permeate up as far as that.

BPL is probably an exception to the above, and on that issue we have a combination of disregard for hams plus conservative free enterprise ideals overriding technical considerations, because the only people with any technical knowledge are too far down in the FCC to have any clout.

I like this thinking. Since I have both a 20WPM Extra AND a 2nd Class

I'm re-posting this because Markie took a crap on it last time and some of you might have gotten confused.

Step 1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

Step 2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

Step 3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Step 4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Tnx, 73, Good luck in the contest.

Nothing heard here. Maybe Todd just needed to talk to someone on 11 meters for a while and he will be back again on 13.556 real soon.

If I'd known operation was going to be so sporatic, I would have made recordings and burned them on a CD.

Good point, Yes, very good point.

No-coders must go to the end of the line for refreshments at meetings.
Code hams must be served first and should take more treats than they want and need. When all the code hams are served and there is nothing left, no-codes get the left-over Coffee grounds and Cookie crumbs. This will teach no-codes that by working harder to be better hams, they will not only get more radio spectrum, they'll also get treats at club meetings and won't have to sit on the floor with an empty stomach.

No-codes can still dig their treats out of garbage cans and toilet bowls if they wish, but they'll have to share them with any CB'ers that might also be at the meeting.

Mark in the Dark, thinks he has to follow-up to everything that gets posted, like that's his job or something. The impression I get of Markie's mindset:

"Damn, I'm late for dinner and someone just posted again. Oh well, better do a follow-up."

Unless Mark is at the synagogue, he normally gets a follow-up turd laid on a post in less than thirty minutes. There must be some k00k award he can win for being so good at that. If only we could get him to put that much effort into ham radio issues.

Good choice for newsgroup on this. CB'ers like to be illegal. I'm sure some CB'er will buy it up can keep 11 meters sounding shitty and then

No, No, No. I'm full of love. If I didn't care for you people I wouldn't post help tips to inspire you all to be better radio amateurs and assets to our radio service. I'm here to lead and guide everyone to a higher level Ham-dom.

Now, many of you are like alcoholics and until you realize you all need help, you're not going to let me help you. But that's OK, I don't mind pointing out everyone's faults & deficiencies. It's actually quite fun.

Maybe. But consider this:

One of the factors driving the "incentive licensing" changes of the 1960s was, IMHO, "Sputnik fever".

Americans had long considered the USA to be #1 in all things technical. Then in 1957, the Soviets orbited the first man-made satellite. They followed it with a number of other space firsts - first animal in space, first pictures of the far side of the moon, first man in space, first woman in space, and much more. It took the USA years to catch up.

That was the era when American schools began revamping their math and science programs big-time. The message was clear that the top government folks thought we had to become much more educated and skilled in all things technological and scientific. Ham radio was part of that, I think.

One of the quotes I heard most often back then was JFK's "ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country". The tone of that message was clear: he was saying Americans weren't trying hard enough, and were too focused on themselves.

The easing of requirements in the 1980s was a direct result of the Reagan Administration's budget cuts and demand to simplify regulations. Code waivers came about by a Presidential request from George Bush 1.

While most changes might not have been the direct result of action by the legislature or the chief executive, those folks set the goals and resources for agencies like FCC. And the commissioners are all appointed by the White House.

Not just disregard for hams but for all users of the affected RF spectrum. Also disregard for the concept of pollution - in this case, spectrum pollution.

Is support for BPL a "liberal" or "conservative" idea?

1) The king (Soloman) never cut the baby in half. He directed it be done in order to find which of the two women's baby it really was (the real mother opted to give it to the other woman to save it's life.. so Soloman gave it to the real mother.)

2) Soloman was widely (and is still) revered as the wisest of kings.

Some of us picked up the gauntlet and took a fifty mile hike or two. I don't know if I was any more physically fit than before doing so, but I was smarter afterward.

That's exactly what BPL is and the Commission decided to loosen the Part 15 standards for it.

I don't know if it is either. It certainly is a stupid idea and it isn't doing well financially anywhere that I know of.

They post fake pictures to poke fun at you. They make a statement. Surely trials and tribulations of obtaining his No-Code license.

"Public Enema Number One" will be hitting the HBO circuit soon. It is I'm re-posting this because Markie took a crap on it last time and some of you might have gotten confused.

Step 1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

Step 2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

Step 3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Step 4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Tnx, 73, Good luck in the contest.

Imagine what step #4 would do to two meter HT sales. The no-coders would be selling them on Ebay at a record rate. Or selling them to fellow CBers.
Of course there is the added benefit of not having our local two meter repeaters jammed up with no-coders telling one another, "You are full quieting here.." (DUH??)
Simplex two meter freqs will be safe, however. Most no-coders don't know what simplex is.

In the case of Slow Code, he actually intends to cut the baby in half.

In that sense, he greatly differs from Slow Code.

Do you think there's a similarity between the tone of JFK's "ask not" quote, and the incenitve licensing changes?

And were praised by the current president for doing so.

I think what's really going on is this:

The stock market went up up up all through the 1990s, in large part because of the techno stocks in things like computing, telecom and the internet.

But there had to come a day of reckoning, because all those stocks weren't going to continue to rise. Market saturation and all that. The slack ran in in 2000-2001, dragging down the whole market, and it has taken more than 5 years for the Dow to catch up. Look where the Dow and NASDAQ were back when BPL was first proposed...

It would sure look good for the current Bush Administation if a new technology were to get the techno sector rising fast again. To someone with little or no understanding of the reality, BPL looks like it could be that technology. Thus it gets support.

> > Is support for BPL a "liberal" or "conservative" idea?
>
> I don't know if it is either.
> It certainly is a stupid idea and it > isn't doing well financially anywhere that I know of.

I think that in the long run we will see that the opposition to BPL put up by hams, the ARRL, and others will have slowed down BPL just enough that it never gets widely implemented. Other technologies are passing it by.

Here in suburban Philadelphia we have had the choice of DSL or cable broadband internet for years now. The latest thing is direct fiber access: the telco runs a fiber right to your house, and terminal equipment lets you have one or multiple phone lines, wideband internet, TV, and possibly other services in the future. You pay for the services used.

The downside is that the terminal equipment is on your property and powered by you, even though you don't own it. So if the power goes off, you lose phone, internet and TV even if your phone, laptop and/or TV don't need 110 AC.

The upside is that not only do you get all those bundled services, but the RFI issues are greatly reduced. The fiber uses light, not electricity, so any RFI is from premises wiring alone.

When my DSL contract is up I may go to FOTS.

It wouldn't have mattered which party was in power if no technically astute people were involved in the decision making process.

Out here in flyover country, we are prisoners of Frontier, a small telephone company. They want to combine local phone service with features like call forwarding and call waiting. They then package those with DSL and want $87 per month. Folks across the Pennsylvania state line, two miles away, get DSL for a flat $29.95 per month. People on both sides of the Ohio River--just fourteen miles away--pay a flat $26.

I already have the generator. Bring on the high speed internet.

Hi Lardass no coder NOVFP Lloyd Davies. When are you going to upgrade your license, after the code requirement is dropped? NO! You're too stupid to pass the written part too!

Oh BTW, try eating a salad every now and then instead of all that pizza you

An imposter posting as N2EY? Not to be confused with N2EY posting anonymously.

Perhaps he should make the effort to review some before having more normal relations with K4YZ.

I was listening on that freq a few nights ago and heard what sounded like a 14 year old kid belching and making fart noises into his microphone.
Perhaps some kid or more likely a juvenile-minded adult was just looking for his 15 minutes of fame on the freq?

What a waste of a perfectly good CD.
Heck I'll bet you couldn't even sell one of them at the Dayton Hamvention along with colourful cover art and a jewel case for $2.00 a pop.

Best to just blow farts on 13.556mHz and if you lucky you may made a few of the SWL blogs or one of the shortwave pirate logging articles in a future issue of the Monitoring Times.

I don't remember Sputnik very clearly, but I do recall how upset people were about Gagarin's flight and other Soviet space firsts.

The other thing I recall clearly from that time is how JFK was elevated to near-sacred status by being killed while in office. You'd have never thought there was any controversy over him or his policies when he was actually in office, after that awful day in Dallas.

I don't know if that's really true. It doesn't take a lot of technosmarts to make the connection between BPL and pollution of the EM spectrum.

I hope so. Frankly, I cannot see any electric utility being willing to put up with all that gingerbread on their MV distribution lines. It's hard enough to keep them maintained as it is.

I was only eight-years-old when Sputnik was launched, but I remember the evening news, the newspapers and the news magazine stories about the possible implications for America. By the time of Gagarin's flight and Alan Shepard's flight, I was an eleven-year-old with much interest in the U.S. space program. I read everything Willy Ley had written on the subject and sought out library books on Von Braun, Robert Goddard and others. It was about that time that I got my first telescope.

The novelty of the new first family brought about the "First Family" album by Vaughn Meader. There were the Camelot stories and the like.
The fact is that the Kennedy Administration brought about the Peace Corps, faced the Soviets down over the missiles in Cuba and began the Alliance for Progress. I have little doubt that, had he lived, Kennedy would have been reelected. Through television, the nation was shocked by his assassination and mourned during his funeral.

It was during my second trip to Washington, D.C. in 1964 that we visited his grave, newly lit by the eternal flame.

It takes a great deal of technosmarts to get through to the average Congressman or Senator.

I'm sure that it could do that in cities. BPL was promised as the answer to proving high speed internet service to rural areas. I don't know of a single rural area where it is in service. The money isn't in the rural areas. It has never been in the rural areas.

It is less than mine. Alltel supplies western Pennsylvania. Verizon handles the areas along the Ohio River and Comcast is in competition with them.

No, I never cut a gig with Soloman. I did take issue with a couple of harp players who play on top of everyone's solos.

I tend to believe that right before you die in a fire is as bad as it can get, but that's just me. "Assnated"....just exactly what is that? Is that I think that's true. I also think there are a bunch of reasons for that:

1) Advances in health care. Things that would have killed a person 40-some years ago are now routinely fixed, or at least controlled so that the person doesn't die.

2) Fast/junk/processed food is so much more common today. There's a bunch of reasons for that, ranging from women's lib to agricultural changes.

3) More sedentary jobs, more cars.

4) The decline in smoking.

IMHO, Sputnik and Muttnik and the other earlier Soviet unmanned firsts were worrisome because they showed that the USA wasn't #1 in all areas.

Gagarin's flight was scarier. If the Rooskies could put a human in orbit and bring him back safely, they could certainly do the same thing with a nuclear weapon.

I remember him clearly. His career went beyond just that album, too, with TV appearances, etc.

After JFK was gone, and RFK came to the fore a few years later, VM had a second career of sorts - which ended abruptly...

> There were the Camelot stories and the like.

Yup. A young president was a real change.

Also the Bay of Pigs fiasco and some whisperings about scandals like Marilyn Monroe.

One very good thing about the Cuban missile crisis (besides the fact that it didn't end with missiles being fired) was that it resulted in the installation of the "hot line" between Washington and Moscow. It seems incredible now, but when that crisis was happening, there was no direct way for the Soviet premier and US president to communicate directly.

I remember it clearly. My point was simply that, had he lived, I doubt he would have acquired the legendary status that he did.

Been there a few times.

In all honesty, I find the Vietnam Memorial to be far more moving.

Heck, if it wasn't for "liberal" programs like the TVA and REA, a lot of rural areas probably wouldn't even have electricity.

Well, I'm excited about learning code. I have been given some great websites for practice. And I'm going to try to test in January 2007.
I don't know if I can be ready that quick - but I'm going to give it a shot. Also, I have been encouraged by several hams to learn the sounds as complete thoughts instead of learning just letter recognition. A bit like learning to read, I guess - so I will try that method. Thanks for the hints.

I think that Mark sent Todd a turd. He's been threatening to do that in past posts, and he finally got the cujones to carry it out. It was probably one of those frozen turds from his back yard.

nah you have been making those threats via forgery but in any event the Postal authories will dbe able to determine that I sent him nothing by my lack of fingerprint on the package

Now there's an interesting subject line. Was does? Blapheming?

I've not blaphemed nor blasphemed against the Jewish faith. If the insufferable simpleton could read, he'd note the difference between "Soloman" and "Solomon".

Mark Morgan is a twit.

Mark, you cannot expect others to take you with a grain of salt if you don't expend the energy in a grain of salt to express yourself. You expect others to stoop to your level of comprehension. Why can't you elevate your level of expression to that of the rest of the world?

At present, you are doing the "crappie flop"....flopping around on the deck with no purpose, and expecting the rest of the world to figure out your intended meaning.

NIMBUSTERS

First off, I want to say I have never posted anything on nimbusters (until today).

Uh huh...Yeah...right....

I have never posted "She-male" images (that type of material I hate more then anything)

Sure...You just promote child abuse and kiddie porn.

nor do I really every want to post anything on there.

Why not? I am quite sure you fit rigft in.

NIMBUSTERS is a virus

No...It's a BBS.

YOU are a virus.

which sits on the world wide web, a group of Neo-nazi's who go around spewing their hate, and trashing other people's sites.

See what I mean...You fit right in. You go around spewing hate too!

Threatening, and wishing certain people (like myself) would Die, or ask if people know anyone that would payu to kill someone (like me) NIMBUSTERS and it little crew of misfits think I'm full of ####

(You ARE full of #### Toiddie....)

when I said I was bring the site down, the truth is I'm NOT full of
####, i sick of them harassign me on here and on the newsgroups (that's when I first learned about the board and began monitoring it and saving pages for evidence) NIMBUSTERS and it's members had me removed from an ISP, thus infringing on my right to free speech, so life a bitch and it's now your ####ing turn.

I counted 101 "words" before the period.

What use is your supposed "free speech" if you don't know how to use it correctly, ya Dork?

the material I gathered, will not only turned over to the host of the website for removal, but will also be sent to the DOJ (including the post from the member looking for someone to pay to Kill me) You see boy you think your ####ing with some dumb###, guess again...I do have the Money to go after you and I am going to go after you....just wait and see you stupid mother####ers!!

You ARE a dumb###, Toiddie...You can't keep from running off at the mouth (like the threats quoted herein) and using foul language to do it...Then you wonder why one person after another moves to get your ISP's pulled.

Stop acting like an idiot and you'll stop getting treated like one.

Keep it up and lose yet ANOTHER ISP.

I doubt there was much in the way of "trial" or "tribulation" in Morkie's obtaining his No-Code license. An agreement to stop hounding the VE's along with an "equitable" exchange of monies and "that was that", as they say...

I just joined this group, thinking I would get in on quality radio discussions. I didn't realize I had mistakenly joined a bunch of juvenile males interested in only out-dissing each other . Are any of you serious about radio?

Dude... Your Bible knowledge is a bit lacking. Everybody wanted to leave Egypt, but after the travel took more time and effort than they hoped, some wanted to go back.

However, the only way you might be "like" Moses is during his exile from Egypt. About all that's following you is a few sheep and he was a horrid public speaker. His first attempt at "helping" involved a murder.. Also, remember that Moses also died before he got to the final destination.

So we can assume that you do CW because you cannot speak, you are going to loose your license as soon as the FCC finds out about your conviction for murder, and you are going to die soon?

"I get a summons to appear for jury duty.
I did this once before in Philly. Their policy was "One trial or one day" and they wouldn't bother you after that.
I get my ass up on Friday (my day off) at 6am so I could be sure not to get there late and have to go through this ordeal again. Turns out it's a capital murder trial and is expected to last several weeks. This is not exactly an appealing prospect, so at break, I hustle to a liquor store and snag one of those sample whiskies and gargle it for about 30 seconds or so and use the little bit on the bottom for aftershave. Got my ass out of there in record time. " - Cujo shares a crafty scheme to get out of jury duty and present yourself to the court as an irresponsible drunk all at the same time in

How the hell did he win the civil war
and build a log cabin
with his bare hands
(as the legend says)?

He didn't even have the instinct
to know he was about to get shot from behind:

"I get a summons to appear for jury duty.
I did this once before in Philly. Their policy was "One trial or one day" and they wouldn't bother you after that.
I get my ass up on Friday (my day off) at 6am so I could be sure not to get there late and have to go through this ordeal again. Turns out it's a capital murder trial and is expected to last several weeks. This is not exactly an appealing prospect, so at break, I hustle to a liquor store and snag one of those sample whiskies and gargle it for about 30 seconds or so and use the little bit on the bottom for aftershave. Got my ass out of there in record time. " - Cujo shares a crafty scheme to get out of jury duty and present yourself to the court as an irresponsible drunk all at the same time in <778c47$pv...@newshost.cyberramp.net>.

"I get a summons to appear for jury duty.
I did this once before in Philly. Their policy was "One trial or one day" and they wouldn't bother you after that.
I get my ass up on Friday (my day off) at 6am so I could be sure not to get there late and have to go through this ordeal again. Turns out it's a capital murder trial and is expected to last several weeks. This is not exactly an appealing prospect, so at break, I hustle to a liquor store and snag one of those sample whiskies and gargle it for about 30 seconds or so and use the little bit on the bottom for aftershave. Got my ass out of there in record time. well thats WHERE the problem lies, if the retards would keep the thread in the Ham Radio NG things would be fine. After reading (a few of) the messages, it makes me wish ham radio would die out. They complain about 'qual;ity' operators and CB'ers but then they get here and act worse that the worst. And yes I'm cross posting this message so that ALL the ham radio retards can see it, with the hopes (but it seems these shit stains have NO CONSIDERATION for other people) will STOP cross posting to NG's that have no bearing on their 'debates'

Morse code RIP, I'm just happy I don't have to any longer worry about it or mess with it.

KEEP THE CODE! You will appriciate your HF privlages more. Your DX ops are much better.

Ok I'll be the other guy....why not keep code?

Relaxing or even getting rid of it will not usher in new blood as I've heard this statement played over and over again.

As a general class ham, I'm in favor of dropping the CW proficienty requirement for HF access. If you like the mode then by all means use it, but if not don't.

It would be far more useful to require more technical knowledge than being able to copy five words / minute. sb106

It would be a very good thing for ham radio to get rid of the code requirement.

HF is the REAL ham radio and it needs more participants.

I hold a general class license and I too would like to see the cw requirement dropped.

It is a pointless requirement that has only hurt the hobby .

HF ham radio should be easier to get into. I am also in favor of a simpler written portion of the testing.
A test that only covers basic rules and regs also safety issues would be appropriate.

If an individual wishes to learn more about the technical aspects of this hobby they will do so on their own.

I hate to puncture anyones balloon, but dropping the code is not going to help bring new or young people into the hobby. Get real!!! In the age of computers and cell phones doing more all the time, do you really think that the younger people are going to spend the time to study to become a ham. I don't think so!!! You people need to come out of your dream world and join the real world. The only thing that is going to happen, is that the people will now upgrade and we still lose, because there won't be any new hams to take their place. You need to stop and look at the big picture and ask your self if the younger people are going to become hams. I have to say it doesn't look too promising. Just my feelings.

DROP the code is a good thing but radio itself is a dying thing.Most hams are over the age of 50 years old as most younger people are into other things nowadays such as computers.

I say drop the code but retain the band plan with the allocated sections for cw , so not to take anything away from the people who still want to only use cw. My biggest pet peeve is , be it 5wpm or 20wpm , it is still only ONE MODE of operation.

We aren't tested on packet,echolink, or any other mode to get even a tech license. Like it or not the code is soon to be a dead horse , and the hf bands will never be the same all because no-one knew the code. (yea right)

I will admit that I am old school. I don't want them to do away with code and I am not a member of FIST. I use the code because I really enjoy it. Using the excuse that it is going to ruin the hobby if they don't do away with it is ludicrous. In my opinion, most of the people that support this are the ones that don't want to have to work a little to learn it.

As I have said before, doing away with code is not going to make this hobby grow. The ones that are here, will upgrade and no one to take their place, still makes it a losing situation. Just my thoughts.

Well, as a general class ham and FISTS member, I certainly am disappointed with the "hams" who not only want to drop the code requirement altogether, but feel the perverted need to bash those who still respect the art and skill of CW.

I am for it being kept but only for the top license. Either that or permit technicians some HF frequencies to experience that form of operation besides 28.300-28.500.

I say drop the code and make RF and electrical safety hands-on classes with proper lightning protection and grounding techniques. This is more valuable than any mode of operation test. I say drop the code but replace the code with more important issues I have listed above.

They should consider dropping the code for 10 or 12 meters or both for Technician class, and include 10 & 12 meters in the test that would give them a taste of HF and maybe more of a incentive to upgrade in class. But not drop the code all together.

Thanks..ck

I am in favor of dropping code. It is not used and the CW I do hear is very, very seldom.
With cell phones, text message, computers, email and chat, the radio hobby is dying.
On the other hand, if they do want to allocate another band to CW users only, that's fine too but I feel CW is hurting ham radio usage.
I do think the tests should be reasonable and would require some thought.

I don't think that dropping code will increase the number of operators. If you want it you can have it now. There's enough under the tech licensing to keep you busy for a while if you look around!

I DO believe that dropping code would vastly increase the number of general operators. Good or bad, this is to be debated. I for one (as stated many times before) am for dropping code FOR GENERAL ONLY. If they want to make the test more technical then go ahead. There are too many techs out there who pounded thru code but yet still have no understanding of basic electronics, safety, and.... CODE for that matter. Loose the code and teach them safety and electronics before they kill themselves!

I understand both sides of code debate, but as far as doing away with it just so a person can upgrade to GENERAL CLASS is a bunch of bull.
How about if they do it this way, do away with code for all classes except General Class??? that way to get access to the majority of the HF band you will have to work a little and pass code to get the priviledges. Most of the people that will upgrade to General will stop there and go no farther, because if they keep code for Extra, that is where they will stop. My feelings are, if they are going to drop code, it should be dropped period. My feelings are, get off your lazy butts and learn the code and then you will not have to worry one way or the other.

Quite a few of us are but we have been invaded by the idiot squad lately. A carefully made kill file will solve the problem and make the newsgroup much nicer. I have a friend who is writing a patch fpr IE that will allow you to kill entire threads according to whom initates it. I will make it available as soon as I get it. Most of the juvenille behavior is a result of those with no true interest in amateur radio, they just want to stir the pot and be heard kind of like those who yell obscenities on the air just to hear peolpe respond.

"I get a summons to appear for jury duty.
I did this once before in Philly. Their policy was "One trial or one day" and they wouldn't bother you after that.
I get my ass up on Friday (my day off) at 6am so I could be sure not to get there late and have to go through this ordeal again. Turns out it's a capital murder trial and is expected to last several weeks. This is not exactly an appealing prospect, so at break, I hustle to a liquor store and snag one of those sample whiskies and gargle it for about 30 seconds or so and use the little bit on the bottom for aftershave. Got my ass out of there in record time. "I get a summons to appear for jury duty.
I did this once before in Philly. Their policy was "One trial or one day" and they wouldn't bother you after that.
I get my ass up on Friday (my day off) at 6am so I could be sure not to get there late and have to go through this ordeal again. Turns out it's a capital murder trial and is expected to last several weeks. This is not exactly an appealing prospect, so at break, I hustle to a liquor store and snag one of those sample whiskies and gargle it for about 30 seconds or so and use the little bit on the bottom for aftershave. Got my ass out of there in record time. Last night I was experimenting with some new antennas and was suprised
to hear the HI beaon from CN from 2006.11.19:23:00:00 through 2006.11.20:01:45:00 when I shut it down because it got too #$%^ cold outside. Nice strong S1 with minimal fades.

"I get a summons to appear for jury duty.
I did this once before in Philly. Their policy was "One trial or one day" and they wouldn't bother you after that.
I get my ass up on Friday (my day off) at 6am so I could be sure not to get there late and have to go through this ordeal again. Turns out it's a capital murder trial and is expected to last several weeks. This is not exactly an appealing prospect, so at break, I hustle to a liquor store and snag one of those sample whiskies and gargle it for about 30 seconds or so and use the little bit on the bottom for aftershave. Got my ass out of there in record time. " - Cujo shares a crafty scheme to get out of jury duty and present yourself to the court as an irresponsible drunk all at the same time in why? I simplyly logical assume some partner was under 18 based on the law of averages I don't go looking for them

you do woger

more of yuor obession with sex

you realy need profesional help perhaps your failure to seek it is why your defective daughter died when she did?

who knows if you had taken proper care of her and/or her mother the daughter might still be a live

I am.

The FCC just posted the newest restructuring in the Federal Register.

It won't be that bad, a lot of no-coders will uprade. Only the sick, lame, and lazy will get out and flood eBay with ham gear, but since the sick, lame and lazy are like CB'ers we don't want them in the amateur service anyway. They aren't motivated enough to improve it, or themselves.

and I still don't think Woger knows the material on the test.

At least N0VFP and N9OGL don't get into bad moods and try to destroy the newsgroups when they fail. Woger can learn something from them, but he's chooses Markie for his mentor. It must be a gay thing.

LOL. Todd must have wanted to fill air-time while he was figuring out how to get tunes back on. I can't hear Omega at night now. I can only hear it during hours of daylight if it's on. November propagation.

I'd use cd-rw for Omega one so I can re-use the CD, I wouldn't put Omega
One on a burn once cd, that would be a waste, even if they do cost only 99 cents.

If you don't care what the radio bands sound like, then you're probably a loser that wants to see code to go away. You don't care if hams are valuable. But if you do care about ham radio, you'll help me promote importance of have good operators.

So what's it going to be with you people? Quality hams? or Lids?

Markie ignore this thread, we already know you want more lids.

Good choice for newsgroup on this. CB'ers like to be illegal. I'm sure some CB'er will buy it up can keep 11 meters sounding shitty and then probably end up dead in a shootout at some shopping mall parking lot somewhere.

See what happens people when you include that AUK fags in your posts? You get more retard threads. We don't need any more retards in the group, Mark in the Dark is enough. Don't post to AUK.

Tnx, 73, good luck on the code test.

Which one do you have? I want Santa to bring me a different one. The one you have doesn't work.

No, No, No, You are all Heathens!!!!

I know the Bible. I read it every Friggen day while I listen to Code. My favorite Bible passage is an End-Times passage and I'm actually mentioned in it. It's found in First Hiram Chapter 2, verse 73:

"and Slow Code, servant of the Lord, smote the Lids with his cattle prod and the Lids were healed. All that saw were amazed and fell to the floor and gave thanks to Slow Code and the bands were made clean that day, and many CB'ers were also converted. And they began preaching and speaking in CW"

Good luck with it. :) We love helping people that want to good hams get a license. That's a good point on learning CW. As you get better and faster at it, you don't hear individual letters, you hear and your mind memorizes the sound of whole words.

Markie will probably flame you for wanting to learn CW, but just ignore Markie, he's a retard.

I can't believe a ham would ask this question. Everyone complains about having to learn CW, that they want to modernize and shouldn't have to learn it, but when they hear a more modern mode that they should know what it is, they don't know it.

It's just like I said, Hams just want an easy license they don't care to modernize. If they did care they would be modernizing. Radio teletype has been around a long time, if they're too lazy to do CW, why aren't they doing teletype.

If we still had a real CW test, people would study theory more and know what they're hearing. But Nooooo, we can't have real radio tests.

2515. Re: ARS License Numbers

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.policy
Date: 2006-11-21 02:09:46 UTC
From: N2EY@AOL.COM
Message-ID: <1164074986.489001.235430@h48g2000cwc.googlegroups.com>
Source record: 173082

These are the numbers of current, unexpired amateur radio licenses held by individuals on the stated dates, and the percentage of the total number of active licenses that class contains:

As of May 14, 2000:

Novice - 49,329 (7.3%)
Technician - 205,394 (30.4%)
Technician Plus - 128,860 (19.1%)
General - 112,677 (16.7%)
Advanced - 99,782 (14.8%)
Extra - 78,750 (11.7%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 334,254 (49.5%)

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 291,209 (43.2%)

Total all classes - 674,792

As of November 15, 2006:

Novice - 23,974 (3.7%) [decrease of 25,355]
Technician - 287,981 (43.9%) [increase of 82,587]
Technician Plus - 34,334 (5.2%) [decrease of 94,526]
General - 131,685 (20.1%) [increase of 19,008]
Advanced - 70,373 (10.7%) [decrease of 29,409]
Extra - 108,192 (16.5%) [increase of 29,442]

(percentages may not add up to exactly 100.0% due to rounding)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 322,315 (49.1%) [decrease of 11,939]

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 310,250 (47.3%) [increase of 19,041]

Total all classes - 656,539 (decrease of 18,253)

Note that these totals do not include licenses that have expired but are in the grace period.

They also do not include club, military or other station-only licenses.

Note also that effective April 15, 2000, new Novice, Technician Plus and Advanced licenses are no longer issued.

Since April 15, 2000, FCC has renewed all existing Technician Plus licenses as Technician. By May of 2010, the number of Technician Plus licenses will drop to zero, because all of them will have been renewed as Technician or allowed to expire. It is therefore informative to consider the totals of the two classes, since the Technician class includes a significant number of Technician Plus licenses renewed as Technician.

Does the thought of something like that get you aroused, Roger? Do you often fantasize about women having sex with dogs?

Think good thoughts about puppy dogs and kittens. Just don't begin thinking about them having sex with humans. Take your medicine and you'll be as normal as you can be.

I'm inclined to discount that one just a bit. The really fat folks I'm seeing are quite young--teens and twenties.

I agree. The percentage of grocery store shelves and coolers filled with pre-prepared, processed food is incredible. I believe that "cooking" at home for many families, consists of opening a package and heating it in the oven or microwave.

That's pretty likely.

That may or may not be much of a factor. After all, the smoking folks are less likely to exercise.

Laika? Didn't we respond with Ham the chimp? I think it appeared to turned out.

Without electrical power, I have no water and I have no furnace--just the stove and the gas logs in the fireplace. The generator gives me all that and TV, lights, ham radio, refrigeration and the computer. Life is good!

The neighbor says he remembers when electricity came to this ridge in 1940. His parents had gas lights and later some electric bulbs and a radio which ran from a 32 volt windmill/battery combo.

<SNIP>

Darn, and it would have been my first CW QSL card too.... However, I think the chances that the postal service lost the thing are much slimmer than the chances that you really didn't mail it.

By the way.. Green Stamps? You got to be kidding... I haven't seen a store giving out green stamps since the 70's... You must still have green shag carpet in the shack and some plaid leisure suits in that closet if you think green stamps are going to impress me. Now vintage radio gear is nice, I've owned and repaired a some that dated back to the 50's myself, but dude you got to catch up a bit here. That much is obvious..

OK. I was thinking more of the population as a whole.

What's really incredible is what's in a lot of it. Between the sugar ("high fructose corn syrup" and the preservatives, there's not much real food...

> I believe that
> "cooking" at home for many families, consists of opening a package and

Or warming up takeout food.

> > 3) More sedentary jobs, more cars.

> That's pretty likely.

> That may or may not be much of a factor. After all, the smoking folks > are less likely to exercise.

But so are the big eaters...

I think it's a big factor for several reasons:

First off, smoking tends to deaden the senses of taste and smell. Food doesn't taste so good, so smokers don't eat as much.

Second, smoking tends to kill the appetite - or so I've been told. I can't recall smokers wanting snacks between meals.

Third, smoking gives a physical pleasure "reward" that lasts several minutes, similar to a coffee-and-a-donut break. Except smoking has zero calories and can last longer. If a person is the kind who needs/wants some kind of little reward during the day, they often replace smoking with eating snacks.

Our culture has changed enormously in its attitude towards smoking, but not towards eating. Yet.

I once knew a heavy smoker who blamed his cigarette habit on the Air Force. His explanation was that he was an aircraft maintenance technician when in the USAF, and he mostly worked on various planes inside the hangars.

He said there was a very strict No Smoking rule in those hangars. The person in charge (a Master Sergeant?) would announce a smoke break about once every 60-90 minutes, and those who smoked would go outside and have one. The nonsmokers had to keep working, though. Taking a break for a snack wasn't allowed.

It didn't take him long to take up the smoking habit!

Now it's turned upside down.

I can recall working in places where it seemed like most people smoked all day long. Then the employers began making parts of buildings "no smoking", and finally whole building. Often what drove it wasn't so much a concern for health as it was for lower insurance premiums. Insurers offer lower fire and health costs if the entire building is nonsmoking.

At first, the smokers I knew enjoyed being able to take a break every hour or so. But unlike the AIr Force example, the company didn't make it easy for them. Going outside was a long trip in many cases, and their work stopped when they were outside. If the boss wasn't a smoker, which was more and more common, the smokers weren't too eager to take breaks.

But snacking at one's desk is accepted and even encouraged. The employee who works through lunch (while eating) is often seen as dedicated.

Yes. There were actually a couple of dog missions by the Soviets.

> Didn't we respond with Ham the chimp?

Yup - but only after the Rooskies. The chimps rode Mercury capsules, same as humans, giving rise to the jibe "a monkey's gonna make the first flight!"

> I think it appeared to > us that we were lagging. Our program was far more sophisticated as it > turned out.

We were far behind the Soviets at the start. They had large operational rockets putting big satellites into orbit, while our smaller boosters blew up on the pad or had to be destroyed because they went out of control.

But that was in the beginning. The US caught up in a few years and the rest is history.

Part of the reason was that the Soviets had been working on space vehicles longer. Here in the USA, plans for a space program had been backburnered in the 1950s for reasons of cost and international policy.
Any orbital satellite would pass over many countries who might not want such overflights, and there wasn't any real precedent except aircraft flights. The USSR didn't worry about that too much, they just built their rockets.

Another factor was the fact that the Soviets were supersecretive about their space program, while we in the USA put it all on live TV. A failed rocket engine in the USSR was known to only a small group of technicians and top government officials, while the same event in the USA was all over the news.

The Soviets also used the trick of "shoot first, then mark the target".
They didn't announce a launch or a mission objective beforehand, so failures didn't happen. For example, they launched a lunar mission that was supposed to crash into the moon - but they missed. They announced it as a successful lunar flyby, and nobody but a few technicians and top government officials knew differently until a few years ago when the records were released.

Actually, that was the whole point! A human was/is a lot more delicate than a nuclear weapon. So if they could orbit and retrieve a human, bringing him down within a few miles of where they intend him to land, hitting a city with an orbiting nuke should be easy....

The reality and the image were quite different. But in those the personal lives of government officials was concerned.

Well, it really moved me from the first time I saw it. All those names...people taking rubbings from them...veterans looking at the names of others who didn't come home...the little memorial flags, flowers, and notes....

I still wonder how the designer was able to imagine it so clearly to begin with. She really did the job.

Wincharger was a big thing back then. One day I hope to have a windmill tower for antennas. When I lived in New York State, there was a ham in Marion with a hundred-footer....

btw, those 32 volt radios ran 32 volts on the plates! No vibrator or dynamotor, just low plate voltage. I think they ran a couple of output tubes in parallel to get enough audio to drive a speaker.

Jim couldn't be me, he hasn't the backbone to support what's right. You and him will be the first ones complaining how bad the operators on the bands are after code is eliminated, and I won't be able to laugh about it because it will affect me too.

No, A long wire, it's up a lot higher then the other one. Wasn't on last night, but we will be on tonight.

Abraham Lincoln was a bonehead he shouldla turned around and punched John Wilkes Booth in the eye.

But I guess he preferred to watcha stupid ass play with some guy dressed up as a tree in it.

How the hell did he win the civil war
and build a log cabin
with his bare hands
(as the legend says)?

He didn't even have the instinct
to know he was about to get shot from behind:
I hope the next president won't be enshrined

"I get a summons to appear for jury duty.
I did this once before in Philly. Their policy was "One trial or one day" and they wouldn't bother you after that.
I get my ass up on Friday (my day off) at 6am so I could be sure not to get there late and have to go through this ordeal again. Turns out it's a capital murder trial and is expected to last several weeks. This is not exactly an appealing prospect, so at break, I hustle to a liquor store and snag one of those sample whiskies and gargle it for about 30 seconds or so and use the little bit on the bottom for aftershave. Got my ass out of there in record time. " - Cujo shares a crafty scheme to get out of jury duty and present yourself to the court as an irresponsible drunk all at the same time in <778c47$pv...@newshost.cyberramp.net>.

I knew President Bush should have fired all the Clintoon people when he got into office and started everything from scratch. The Clintoon people couldn't do anything right. Most of all wage and win a war against terror.

It sounds to me like you have it all covered. One extra thing you can do is just have it send random words for about four or five minutes, then people can check their copy with what was sent.

Also, make sure it can send code up to 20 to 25 wpm. Some people might want to practice to be real hams.

If code is eliminated the riff-raff that will overrun the bands will drive a lot of people out of amateur radio. It's bad now even with a 5wpm code.

Back when I got my license there was alot of technical discussions, experimentation and lot of hams improving their communication and technical skills. Now with 5 wpm, convertions are mainly about appliance operating, or how someone did something stupid and burned up their rigs, things just like you can hear on CB.

No one is going to quit amateur radio because the code requirement was eliminated, maybe a couple might. It's the retards that will flood the bands afterwards that are going to drive good hams out of ham radio.

We already have one CB service, we don't need two.

Ok, fair enough.

On the threads that you do choose to take a shit on, how do you choose them, and why do you leave some posts un-turded?

I think we'd all be interested in your answer to that question.

Are you kidding? That is like asking a monkey why he shits when he does and which trees he chooses to do it from. Like the monkey, Mark just craps whenever he feels it is time to vacate his bowels.

What is the average age of a ham, around 60??? It is a dying hobby. CW is dead. When was the last time someone's life was actually saved by the use of CW??? One can still study electronic theory without having to learn CW. Knowing or not knowing CW doesn't make for civilized conversation on the ham bands. Just listen to the liberty net.

What color horse do you use for transportation? Surely you don't use these newfangled things called cars do you? You know of course, horses make you a better, more skilled driver, right? Cars are for stupid, lazy people, who just want to go somewhere, with no care how it easy it was to get there. And what if there is a gas shortage? The horse can take you to the hospital to save your life for only the cost of some grass. You could die if you were hurt and someone didn't have a horse to save your life. Yes, these stupid car drivers have certainly dumbed down driving. I think everyone should have to spend 5 years riding horses only. No cars. Then, when they can pass a test proving they can shoe a horse proficiently, they can be granted a provisional car driving license, but to keep it, they have to shoe a horse faster each year. And to get a permit for the freeway, they need to shoe at least 25 hoofs a minute.

See the idiocy of your rants, SC?

THE THANKSGIVING PRAYER
- William S. Burroughs

(To John Dillinger and hope he is still alive.
Thanksgiving Day November 28 1986")

Thanks for the wild turkey and the passenger pigeons, destined to be shat out through wholesome American guts.

Thanks for a continent to despoil and poison.

Thanks for Indians to provide a modicum of challenge and danger.

Thanks for vast herds of bison to kill and skin leaving the carcasses to rot.

Thanks for bounties on wolves and coyotes.

Thanks for the American dream,
To vulgarize and to falsify until the bare lies shine through.

Thanks for the KKK.
For nigger-killin' lawmen,
feelin' their notches.

For decent church-goin' women,
with their mean, pinched, bitter, evil faces.

Thanks for "Kill a Queer for Christ" stickers.

Thanks for laboratory AIDS.

Thanks for Prohibition and the war against drugs.

Thanks for a country where nobody's allowed to mind the own business.

Thanks for a nation of finks.

Yes, thanks for all the memories-- all right let's see your arms!

You always were a headache and you always were a bore.

Thanks for the last and greatest betrayal of the last and greatest of human dreams.
